Democrats Pick Up Many Seats In House And Senate In Populous States, But Republicans Likely To Keep Control Of Both Branches Of Federal Legislature—Beveridge Beaten And Lodge On Ragged Edge—Mondell, Townsend And Other High Priests Of Newberryism Are Scourged By Popular Wrath

BY G. R. HOLMES

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—The political pendulum that two years ago carried the Republican party into overwhelming control of the national government and many state governments, has plunged backward with a mighty surge and put many Democrats into power once more.

A notable series of Democrat gains marked up by voters in nearly every state yesterday has fallen short of ousting the Republicans from control of congress, however, and according to available returns this morning, the Republicans will continue in control of both branches of congress, altho by greatly reduced majorities.

The Democrats have gained three, possibly four seats in the senate, cutting the Republican majority to 18 or 19, and in the house the Republican majority has been cut almost to the vanishing point.

Returns this morning indicated the G. O. P. control of the lower house will be not more than 20 seats at the outside and it may be wiped out altogether.

Returns from many districts in the west are still missing.

In the great populous states like New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Missouri the Democrats picked up congressional seats in impressive fashion. The solid Republican delegations now in congress from Indiana and Ohio were eaten into heavily by the Democrats, while in Missouri where there are now 14 Republicans and only two Democrats it appeared that the situation would be practically reversed.

New York and New Jersey were the great beacon lights of Democratic success in the east.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 8.—With congressman Simon D. Fess leading Senator Atlee Pomerene, veteran Democrat, by less than 7,000 votes, and with approximately 600,000 votes remaining to be tabulated in the most interesting contest of the election, Ohio Democrats this afternoon are not prepared to concede the defeat of the Canton statesman, altho admitting that "things look bad."

On behalf of Congressman Fess, a claim was put forth that he would win by 20,000 with the missing 2,500 precincts accounted for.

Vic Donahey, "reform" state auditor for eight years, had apparently defeated Col. Carmi A. Thompson, Republican business man and close friend of President Harding by a plurality of 40,000 to 50,000, altho Republican state chairman Miller announced that we are sitting tight, conceding nothing, and will let the figures speak for themselves.

The dry's of Ohio have downed the proposed beer amendment by a majority that may reach 40,000 and may even go higher. Heavy wet leads in Cleveland, Toledo and Cincinnati, were overcome by the avalanche of dry votes in rural counties.

The New Russia

MOSCOW, Nov. 8 — During the five years of Soviet rule there have been numerous lawsuits concerning "ritual matters." A particularly sensational case was that in 1920 against the Czarist procureur, Wimer, who had been the public prosecutor in the Baillus case. Through these few suits and through the system of immediate investigation of all ritual murder rumors the Soviet government had undoubtedly succeeded in making a clean sweep of the pogromistic proclivities once so carefully fostered among certain elements of the population.

There is no anti-Jewish agitation in Russia today. The Jewish question plays a very insignificant part in present-day events here. It often is erroneously exaggerated. Thus it is wrong, for instance, to assume that the fact that he is a Jew would eliminate Trotsky as a successor to Lenin (in my opinion he is the only man who would seriously come into question as such). This question is not even discussed anywhere in Russia, not even in the anti-Bolshevistic circles.

I have stated that Russia has never known an anti-Semitism in the western sense of the word. The old Russia, it is true, knew the artificially produced hatred of the Jews—a hatred that lived in the streets—and it knew the pogrom sentiment created thereby among the ignorant masses.

However, Russia has never known that which is generally understood in the term "anti-Semitism." This question is not even discussed anywhere in Russia, not even in the anti-Bolshevistic circles.

ATHENS, Nov. 8—Miss Ann Munn, former Red Cross nurse in France, has resigned as Athens-co supervising public health nurse. She goes to Middletown to take up similar work after much success here. She has been succeeded by Miss Clara Cannanaga, of the county's nursing staff.

BUCHYRUS, Nov. 8—The bill for ice for the first month of operation of the sanitary and healthful drinking fountain, that was installed to take the place of the two public wells ordered out by the city board of health, has been rendered. It amounts to $34.93, or over $1.00 a day. The oldest resident does not remember when the public wells ordered dismantled cost a dollar a day for maintenance.

ELYRIA, Nov. 8—John Smith was fined $10 for permitting his ten-year-old daughter to steal coal from cars on the B. & O. tracks. Two other girls, 15 and 17, who admitted stealing coal, also were reprimanded.

ELYRIA, Nov. 8—Nils Tufverson and his wife, Hattie, has asked for $20,000; $5,000 and $15,000 respectively, from W. S. Kohn and Robert F. Kertz for injuries sustained, it is claimed, when the defendants' truck collided with the buggy in which they were riding.

LIMA, Nov. 8—Lee Stumbaugh, 49, of 413 W. High-st., was fined $50 and sentenced to 30 days in the Toledo workhouse, after he was found guilty of a double charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

Mrs. Ethel Ream, 35, same address, arrested on similar charges, was fined $25 and given a suspended sentence of 30 days in the workhouse on her promise of good behavior.

The pair was arrested at the Ream home, following an altercation with Mrs. Ream's husband, Harry Ream, who testified he found them acting improperly in his home.

Ream was exonerated of a charge of beating Stumbaugh unconscious.

DEFIANCE, Nov. 8—All work for crippled children in Defiance-co, which has resulted in the caring for 58 cases since December, 1921, with 19 more diagnosed and ready for treatment—has been halted because of failure of the county commissioners to authorize payment of $2,357.57 to the state board of charities, according to a statement made by W. P. Wallace, chairman of the crippled children's committee of the Defiance Rotary club.

The public is urged by the Rotary club to act behind the crippled children's movement and to request action by the county commissioners. The state board of charities has given notice that no more work will be done for the crippled children in Defiance-co.

A New Series on the Soviet Regime by Georges Popoff

EDITORIAL NOTE

In the accompanying article Mr. Popoff indicates that so negligible is the Jewish question in Soviet Russia at the present time that it is erroneous to think that this consideration would have anything to do with Trotsky's eligibility to succeed Lenin. "The question is not even discussed in Russia," Popoff writes.

But even in the Soviet Ukraine there are today scarcely any traces left of this systematic Jew-baiting propaganda. Fact is that the Soviet government has succeeded in "cleaning up" with those elements and those inclinations, which fill the darkest and most shameful chapter of the history of Czarism.

Anyone who today is commissioned to study and describe conditions in Russia—and surely that is not an all too pleasant duty in view of what those conditions are—is in honor and fairness bound to emphasize this noteworthy fact.

Skin Ablaze with Eczema

Constant Itching Almost Unbearable!

We know there is one thing that stops eczema, and that is more red blood-cells! S. S. S. builds them by 25 million! You can increase your red-blood cells to the point where it is practically impossible for eczema to exist. We know that as blood-cells increase in number, blood impurities vanish! We also know that night follows day. Both are facts! But have you ever actually taken advantage of this wonderful fact? Thousands just like you have never thought about it! Skin eruptions, eczema with all its fiery, skin-digging torture and its so-it-tingling, unbearable itching, pimples, blackheads and boils, they all pick up and go when the tide of blood-cells begins to roll in! Blood-cells are the fighting-clients of nature! S. S. S. builds them by the million! It has been doing it since 1892! S. S. S. is one of the greatest blood-cell builders, blood-cleaners and body-builders known to its mortal. When you put these facts together, then to continue to have eczema and skin eruptions looks more like a sin than a disease. Mrs. Arthur N. Smith, West St., Newark, Ohio, writes: "My little girl had a very bad case of eczema. She began taking S. S. S. and is well now. I thank you very much. I tell my friends what a good medicine it is. I cannot talk too much about it, for I know it is O. K."

Here is your opportunity. S. S. S. contains only vegetable medicinal ingredients. Because S. S. S. does build red-blood-cells, it cures rheumatism, builds firm flesh, fills out hollow cheeks, beautifies the complexion, builds you up when you are run-down. S. S. S. is sold at all drug stores, in two sizes. The larger size bottle is the more economical.

Daugherty On Freedom Of Speech

ATTORNEY GENERAL DAUGHERTY asserts that there are "countless elements thrusting always at the foundation of established government." He is opposed to them. They "are ever ready insidiously to harmfully impede national progress." He would stop them. There are those who "are always ready to malign the government." He is doubtful whether they should be permitted to speak. He assures his readers that "those who oppose honest government are but a misguided minority."

We should all resist the tremendous temptation to consider Daugherty's relation to "honest government." It may be well to observe, however, that if free discussion does not carry with it the right of every human being to question the whole "foundation of established government" it is a farce and a lie. Even if some criticism is what Mr. Daugherty considers "insidious" or even "malign" it must be entitled to a place in the arena of debate.

These upstart officials always start by paying homage to free discussion and before they finish they have struck it down. What they do not like they call "insidious" and what is "insidious" they exclude. But what Daugherty does not like is not a standard for everybody else. What he does like is disliked by others and their standard is just as good as his. Which brings us right back to the fundamental need of free discussion, so that conflicting standards of what is right and what is wrong may freely compete for the support of all men and women.

When Mr. Daugherty gets thru with freedom of speech it is a bedraggled thing, a thing that is prostituted to the service of governing overlords, who fear that their own reactionary views will not survive intelligent criticism.

Playing The Bourbon Game

SENATOR BORAH again warns the Republican party that if it does not bring about a change in economic conditions another party will. "What little influence I have," he says, "is being exerted in that direction."

The Republican party has been under warning ever since Robert M. La Follette broke over the borders of Wisconsin. Warning has borne not the slightest fruit. Not even the experience of utter rout and dispersal, followed by a second defeat, influenced it one iota. It is at heart bourbon, and history offers no prospect that it will ever be anything at heart but bourbon. It prefers defeat to any real compromise of its bourbonism, because, with the opposition party in power, it is given the opportunity it craves of rallying and remobilizing all the elements of discontent to do its service.

The Republican party in Chicago in 1920 made no pretense of progressivism. Why? It had been eight years out of power. It didn't need the progressives as such. Democratic rule had driven back the old progressives to its side without their progressivism. It had at its call the old Republican party, normally a majority, plus the foreign sympathizers who were more bent on defeating Wilson and the League of Nations than they were on protecting their daily bread.

It is the old story over and over again, and will be until men like Borah and La Follette quit "exerting what little influence they have" to propping up an organization whose heart and source and character they can never change. The Republican party is the logical conservative party of the nation. Its political ringmasters and financial underwriters are men and interests who derive the most benefit out of things as they are. Every four years they rattle the feed bag and the millions whose grandfathers voted for Lincoln, "sustained and soothed" by the sympathetic Borahs and La Follettes, come running like geese to an empty trough.

To tie two diametrically opposite interests together under one banner is completely to emasculate the weaker interest. And the progressive element in the Republican party, so long as it stays within that party, is always the weaker interest. It is the Borahs and La Follettes who, by remaining on the old ship, are keeping it from sinking.

New York Day-by-Day

WALT MASON

CANDOR

James Towhead went to Dint's store, where he had purchased goods, suit, codfish, varnish for the floor, and purple riding hoods, and saw to hew, and drills to bore, and shredded breakfast foods. James said, "The first will soon be here, when I should pay my bill, but I can't do that same, I fear. I'm broke, already, still; I have an access in my ear, my wife is living ill. Misfortune hit me unawares and made my spirit proud; the way my gouty father swears would rend a heart of stone, my aunt fell down the cellar stairs and broke her collarbone. The surgeon, always at my gate, has made my bundle thin; the druggist brings his precious freight, and bones me for the tin, and so your bill will have to wait until my ship comes in." The merchant cried, "Oh, James, my son, your candor cheers my soul, and you may buy goods by the ton while you are in the hole, and you'll receive no bill or dun until you have your roll. All merchant princes like to aid the man who doesn't speak, who, finding pay must be delayed, the candid truth will speak; we'll wait till your misfortunes fade, be it a year or week. Your credit's good, so help me Pete, your hard luck naught avail; so buy this pot of pickled feet, or take this keg of nails, and here's a bale of shredded wheat, a can of kippered whales."

A whining little puppy was shivering on the curb in front of a big department store on Thirty Fourth street the other day at midnight. Late home-goers stopped to pat it. Soon a crowd gathered—one got it hot milk and another took an old blanket from his automobile to wrap it up. At 1 o'clock a policeman on his way home picked up the puppy and took it with him. There isn't much news to all this save that it shows a big city has a kind heart.

and Dr. Royal S. Copeland, Democrats, by the greatest pluralities ever recorded in a New York state election.

In New Jersey they turned down former Governor Ruman, and Senator Frelinghuysen and put in George S. Silzer and Gov. Edward I. Edwards, Democrats, as governor and senator respectively, by impressive majorities. Silzer and Edwards are openly and militantly wet.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge has barely managed to squeeze his way to re-election over Col. William A. Gaston, Democrat. Returns this morning place Lodge's estimated plurality at less than 5,000.

Gaston had not been considered even a menace to Lodge by the Republicans and his show of strength amazed leaders in both parties.

In Rhode Island Senator Peter G. Gerry, Democrat, has been re-elected over R. L. Beckman, in what was generally regarded as a silk stocking senatorial fight.

Westward from the Alleghenies, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan and Missouri stood forth as marking up notable Democratic gains.

Ohio, the home state of President Harding, where the national administration was more of an issue than in any other state, apparently elected a Democratic governor and possibly 8 to 10 congressmen, but the returns indicated that Simon D. Fess, Republican, has been elected to the senate over Senator Pomerene. Ohio thus, in effect, straddled the issue, giving President Harding another Republican senator but turning out the Republicans lock stock and barrel in state affairs.

One of the greatest single surprises of the election was the defeat of Albert J. Beveridge, Republican, by Samuel M. Ralston, Democrat, for the senatorship in Indiana. Two years ago Senator James Watson, Republican, carried the state by around 175,000, and who he supported Beveridge, Ralston apparently has carried the state on the face of today's returns by about 27,000.

Another great upset was in Michigan which has been only akin to Pennsylvania and Vermont in its traditional Republicanism. Here Ferris, Democrat, apparently has defeated Charles E. Townsend, Republican, for the senate by about 10,000. This gives the Democrats another seat in the senate on which they had not even counted.

Senator James Reed has come back in Missouri in smashing fashion, considering the bitter fight that was waged against him by the Wilson Democrats.

Nebraska is another state that disclosed a mixed feeling on the part of the electorate. There the voters turned out a Republican state administration and put in a Democratic one, headed by "Brother" Charles Bryan, brother of the famous commoner.

At the same time they turned out a Democratic senator, Gilbert M. Hitchcock and elected R. H. Howell, a Rooseveltian progressive, a pronounced advocate of municipal ownership.

In the sparsely populated states of the west and northwest the Democrats have elected their senators it appeared this morning.

J. F. T. O'Connor, Democrat, has picked Lynn J. Frazier, Republican, in North Dakota. Senator John B. Kendrick, Democrat, in Wyoming apparently has been re-elected over Frank W. Mondell, Republican leader of the house.

Burton K. Wheeler, Democrat, has defeated Carl W. Riddick, Rep., Senator William H. King, Democrat, of Utah, and Senator A. A. Jones, Democrat, of New Mexico, have apparently been re-elected.

for United States senator," continued Chairman Miller.

Belated returns received this afternoon, Miller declared, showed Carmi Thompson was gaining 12 votes to the precinct.

"If Thompson continues to gain at the rate of at least 10 votes to the precinct, he will be elected," asserted Chairman Miller who said that the majority of the precincts still out are Republican.

He stated that returns from 5,747 precincts this morning gave Donahay a lead of 22,357, but that figures from 313 additional precincts received later this forenoon, cut down Donahay's majority to 18,321.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 8.—Senator Alton Pomerene was whitening the lead of his Republican opponent as returns continued to pour in this morning. At noon the vote from 6,425 Pts. for senator gave: Fess 62,475, Pomerene 54,254.

Thompson carried Cuyahoga county by a margin of 2,547 on complete returns while Pomerene led Fess in the county by 2,505.

REPUBLICANS SAVE

LITTLE IN WRECK

IN WEST VIRGINIA

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Nov. 8.—One congressman with a possibility of two, together with the state senate, seemed today all the Republicans had saved from yesterday's landslide.

M. Neely, Democratic opponent of Senator Sutherland, had increased his lead beyond 12,000 when more than two thirds of the returns had been received.

Congressman B. L. Rosenbloom of first district appeared assured of re-election in the third district Representative Stuart Reed was about 2,500 ahead of E. H. Morton, but the Democrats claimed this district on returns from 63 missing precincts.

In other four districts, the Democratic candidates had leads ranging from 1,000 to 4,000.

William Blizard and Fred Mooney, indicted mine workers of officials running for the state assembly, went down to defeat with their Republican associates in Kanawha county.

HAMILTON CO IN

DEMOCRATIC CAMP

CINCINNATI, Nov. 8.—A V. Donahay and Senator Alton Pomerene both forged ahead of Thompson and Fess in the count of 500 complete precincts out of the 618 in Cincinnati and Hamilton county early this morning. Donahay's total for the 500 precincts was 62,245 votes while his opponent received 61,027.

Senator Pomerene's total for the 500 precincts was 62,556 votes while Simon D. Fess received 57,450.

Nathan Young Democratic candidate for attorney general of the state was leading C. C. Crabbe by 6,600 votes. Young's total was 63,128 while Crabbe's total was 56,528.

Stanley Matthews was leading in the race for supreme court in the county with 60,208 while Robt. H. Day had 47,809 and Benson W. Hough 45,117.

The vote showed Francis Hamilton in the lead for court of appeals with a vote of 49,574 or nearly 13,000 votes ahead of his opponent.

The beer and wine amendment carried in the county and city by almost four to one majority.

REPUBLICAN GAINS

OFFSET BY LOSSES

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—In the election of yesterday, Democrats have elected candidates to six seats now held by Republicans and have lost two to Republican candidates on the face of returns up to 10 o'clock today.

Democratic senatorial victories have been scored in Indiana, New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Michigan and North Dakota.

Republican senatorial victories have been scored in Ohio and N. Y. These results reduce the Republican majority in the senate to 16. Three states are still undecided as to the senate, Minnesota, West Virginia and Delaware, in all of which Republican senators are running for re-election.

With a steel frame a cut of ordinary size has been designed that has withstood a crushing weight of a ton.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—President Harding plans to establish a precedent for the official observance of Armistice day in the national capital by going to Arlington cemetery on November 11, accompanied by Secretary of the Navy Denby and Secretary of War Weeks to lay a wreath on the tomb of the unknown soldier. Plans for this ceremony were announced at the Whitehouse this afternoon.

FERRIS, POPULAR IN DETROIT, WINS OVER TOWNSEND-R

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 8.—Woodbridge N. Ferris, Democrat twice governor of Michigan, has defeated Charles E. Townsend, Republican incumbent in the Michigan senatorial contest by a margin estimated at between 10,000 and 15,000 according to figures available early today.

A virtual Democratic landslide in Detroit and Wayne county enabled Ferris to overcome a Townsend outstate lead and pile up a safe lead.

The few remaining precincts yet to be heard from cannot possibly change the result. Democratic headquarters claimed this morning.

Ferris also carried big centers of population like Genesee, Kent, Kalamazoo, Oakland, St. Clair, Calhoun, Ingham, Ionia, and Marquette counties.

With 2,061 precincts out of 2,906 in the state heard from, Ferris is leading by a safe majority. In Wayne 587 out of 659 Pts. gave Ferris 61,205 and Townsend 41,795 showing Ferris 19,510 in the lead. This indicates Ferris' majority in Wayne will exceed 22,000.

The Republicans appeared to have carried the rest of the ticket, with one exception, electing Gov. Groesbeck.

DOG IS BASIS OF $12,000 IN SUITS

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 8.—A dispute over a Scotch collie dog which wagged his tail to the name of "Laddie" opened a case in common pleas court yesterday in which two women, each of whom at one time claimed the animal, have sued one another for damages. One of them, Mrs. Lucy P. Cramer, wife of a prominent attorney, has entered suit against Mrs. Molly Bleris, well known doctor's wife, for $7,020, which she says represents damages to herself and her property when the other woman attacked her following an altercation over the dog.

Mrs. Morris filed a cross suit for $5,000 which she says represents the loss of the dog during the time that Mrs. Cramer kept him.

The dispute arose originally because the two women had dogs which exactly resembled one another. Both pups got the wanderlust and left their homes, one never to return and the other to show up at the home of the other dog's mistress and so cause the merry mixup which resulted.

The vote was: Mayfield 167,171; Paddy 70,023.

G. Q. P. MARGIN IN THE HOUSE IS DWINDLING

Late Returns Magnify The Tremendous Sweep Of The Democratic Victory

By GEORGE R. HOLMES.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Late returns today from closely contested territory greatly magnified the magnitude of Democratic gains made in Tuesday's election.

On the basis of returns up to 10:45 o'clock today it is now fairly certain that the Republican majority in the next senate will be reduced to 12 and possibly to 10, as compared with the present majority of 24.

Republican senatorial defeats suffered in New York, New Jersey, Michigan, Maryland, W. Va., Delaware, Indiana and probably in North Dakota encompassed this result.

The Democrats lost only two of their senators—Hitchcock in Nebraska and Pomerene in Ohio.

In the house of representatives the present overwhelming Republican majority of 169 has been cut almost to the vanishing point, and it may be conceivably controlled by either party by a few votes. The belief prevailed however, that in the final tabulations the Republicans will have maintained control by a small margin.

Returns from congressional districts in the west have been slow in coming in.

The magnitude of the Democratic gains may be judged from the popular centers which went overwhelmingly Republican two years ago.

On the face of returns this forenoon, the Democrats have gained 15 seats in New York, making 24 Democrats from New York in the next house as against nine in the present one; they have gained 7 seats in New Jersey; 8 in Pennsylvania; 12 in Missouri; 2 in Kansas; 3 in Tennessee; 4 in W. Va.; 8 in Ohio; 5 in Indiana; 4 in Oklahoma, and a scattering from other states.

CALIFORNIA LOVES

HIRAM TO TUNE OF A 300,000 VICTORY

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Nov. 8.—Re-elected by the greatest majority ever accorded him in his long career in politics, Senator Johnston led the entire Republican ticket in California to an overwhelming victory.

Johnston will win by at least 300,000.

Friend W. Richardson has been elected governor over Thomas Lee Woolwine, Democrat by a majority expected to reach 200,000.

All congressional candidates in California but two were disposed of at the primary and these early indications show, were returned to their seats at Washington.

Wild Quail Lodges In

City Building's Hall

BUCKYRUS, O., Nov. 8.—Charles Aumiller was sitting on a chair in the doorway of his store, on the west side of the public square here when a quail ran across the sidewalk, dodged between Aumiller's feet and scurried to the back of the hallway.

Investigation disclosed that the bird had caddled in a corner, prepared to spend the night. It was not disturbed. Next morning it flew away.

DAVID AND HAPPY GIGGLES HELP ARMIE ARMADILLO. ONE day as David was downtown shopping with his mother, he chanced to stray away from her side and stood gazing at some queer-looking baskets.

"I'd like to know what that basket is made from," he mused, then he started as a hand touched his arm. Turning he saw his little elfin friend, Happy Giggles, smiling at him. "Well, of all things, Happy Giggles!" exclaimed David. "Where did you come from anyway?"

"From Makebelieve Land, of course," replied the elfin, touching the lovely basket with his magic stick.

"What did you do that for?" David asked. "Is it really an animal?"

"Sure it is," chuckled the elfin as the basket unfolded and the queerest little creature David had ever seen, sat up and nodded at Happy Giggles. "Well! Well! I just wondered if you were so dead asleep you couldn't feel my touch! Armie Armadillo, this is my little friend, David. He was just wondering what kind of a creature you are."

"An armadillo from Western Africa," laughed the little creature yawning. "Say, Happy Giggles, can't you hurry and find me a nice home? I wish to belong to some one who will appreciate me and truly like me and keep me dusted. Why, here in this place I get dusted once a week I'm doing well."

"He was a funny-looking little fellow. His body was covered with three large and massive horny plates. One covered the head, another the shoulders and the third his back. "Your plates are fastened together with rings that look like horns," David said. "Mighty glad I am to have those rings," smiled Armie Armadillo. "If they weren't there, anyone could do me harm in between my armored plates. You see, when I'm curled up, you can't see my body for my armor."

"You remind me of the ant-eater," laughed David. "Do you live on ants, too?"

"I can eat them," Armie Armadillo laughed, "but I much prefer roots, grains, worms and insects that are more easily found. No, I don't fancy house-breaking. Besides, my feet are not formed for much digging. Of course my feet are large and strong enough, but not nearly as strong as those of the ant-eater. But I can run faster than Mr. Manis and my hearing is so sharp that I can hear footsteps long before I can see my enemy. "But say, Happy Giggles, I'm not complaining because I'm made into a basket, but I do wish you'd find me a nice home and send me there. I'm not a bit of use on this shelf."

Just then the clerk came up, followed by David's mama. How they both laughed when David insisted his mama should take the armadillo basket home with her. But he got his wish and home the basket went. David never revealed his secret about the dear little animal carried into the shape of a basket, but oftentimes when the light is low in the fireplace David gets the basket out, Happy Giggles brings it back to life and the three friends have a wonderful time telling each other stories.

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

Copyright, 1922, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

The Invitation Jerry Tiger Brought Madge.

MY mother-in-law would have been amply recompensed for my apparent by nonchalant reception of her news could she have seen me after she had swept offensively out of the room. I locked the door behind her and threw myself face downward on the bed to do battle with the raging, primitive jealousy which had leapt up within me at the sight of the photograph of Claire Foster, with its bizarre inscription to Dick.

I could carry off to her my ailing tolerant statement that Dick had dozens of such photographs, and my belief that neither the possession of the photograph nor the inscription meant anything at all.

But I could not convince my own jealous soul, though my common sense and my knowledge of my temperamental Peter Pan tried to whisper to me that I had uttered only the truth to Dick's wrathful mother. So for an hour that seemed a week I tortured myself with conjectures as to the true meaning of the things which appeared to be connected with Dick's attitude, Dr. Pettit's hints, and the discovery of the photograph.

Lillian's knock—I can always distinguish it from that of any one else—brought me to an upright position, and a wild-eyed glimpse of myself in the mirror. My eyes were reddened, my face gray and drawn, my hair disheveled.

"Will you come back in five minutes?" I called in as careless an intonation as I could manage.

"Of course," she returned cheerily, and I frantically employed the interval in making up my face, rubbing my cheeks into color, and arranging my hair. When she returned I looked fairly presentable again, although I had no hope that her keen eyes would not recognize my depression.

A Rare Jest.

She gave only a cursory glance at me, however, and spoke with the amused intonation which she always uses in speaking of Jerry Tiger.

"Our redoubtable Jerry waits below," she said, "and craves speech with thee. I tried to get him to unfold his soul to me, but all I could get out of him was 'Yes, ma'am, no, ma'am, I'll wait for you, ma'am.'"

It is a rare jest to Lillian and Dick, this single-track devotion of simple Jerry Tiger to me, and they never fail to give me the full benefit of their merriment. But I shatter myself that neither of them ever guesses that sometimes the jest grows a trifle monotonous and annoying.

"I always knew Jerry was a person of rare good sense," I retorted lightly. "I'll come down directly. Are you with me, or are you too jealous?"

"It will be a terrible strain, but I'll try to hide my feelings," she said. "And Jerry is simply brimming over with something that may be interesting. I really couldn't miss it."

We found Jerry in the kitchen with Junior on his knee and Marion listening absently to his talk of the various worn-out horses and other animals whose patron saint he was. He jumped up as he saw me, with the innate courtesy which he always exhibits, though I am sure he never has heard of the convention which demands that a man rise when a woman enters the room.

"Oh, Here's the Mail!"

"We're makin' elder down at our house, Ma'am," he said, "an' Ma'am who wants to know if you all won't come down. You know how Marion liked it when she was out here before, and Junior's old enough now to drink some, isn't he?"

Junior jumped up and down in delight, though I knew he had no slightest idea of what Jerry meant. But Jerry's appearance generally spells some delightful farm experience to the children, who are devoted to him, and my baby boy is nothing if not demonstrative.

"Dooner love tider!" he announced. "Dooner love tider!" Jerry threw back his head and laughed so loudly that the wooden beams of the kitchen echoed. To him, any remark of Junior's is the keenest witicism.

"Ain't he the cute little shaver, though?" he asked of the nearest wall. Then he turned again to me. "Ma and Paw got a dandy mess of scallops last night, and Ma'am if you all will come down she'll fry a lot."

"We'll be right over," I promised, for we have learned that one of Mrs. Tiger's invitations is not to be treated lightly. She is the best cook in the surrounding country, and her treatment of any kind of new food lucky declares to be the highest form of art.

"That's fine," he assented heartily. "Oh, here's the mail and papers! I nearly forgot. And it's back and tel Ma'am you'll be over pretty soon. Yes, Ma'am. No, Ma'am, and ducking his head after his invariable phrase, he went out of the kitchen, tagged closely by the little child I so dearly love.

It is a rare jest to Lillian and Dick, this single-track devotion of simple Jerry Tiger to me, and they never fail to give me the full benefit of their merriment. But I shatter myself that neither of them ever guesses that sometimes the jest grows a trifle monotonous and annoying.

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT Love and "The Conqueror"

Copyright, 1922, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

HAVE you read it—the book they're all talking about?

I have, and I wish I knew right where I could find the author. I would throw the book at his head and I would take perfectly good aim, too—be sure of that.

It is all about a man who runs away from his wife and children, not because he is in love with someone else, not because his wife is in love with someone else. And the wife isn't a vixen, or a slattern or a fool, either.

She is just a regular woman, dead in love with her husband, devoted to her children, pretty, sensible, and self-respecting. That is what's the matter. She is too self-respecting. She won't be "conquered" by the man—that's all.

Winifred Black

She takes good care of her home. She is a good housekeeper. She attends to all her husband's wants, but if he thinks one of the children ought to be punished and she thinks the child ought not to be punished, she sticks to her opinion and says so.

If she believes that the neighborhood is not healthy she says that too, and sticks to it, even when she realizes that her husband knows that what she says is true, but that he will never admit it until she gives up and says that of course he is right as he always is.

No, she is not argumentative, she isn't quarrelsome, she isn't self-assertive, at all. She is just an honest human being. And because she is, her husband cannot bear it and runs away.

He goes into all sorts of places, into the wilderness and lives with the savages, into the slums of the great cities and lives with the outcasts, into the student quarters and lives with the students, and always he is followed by the humiliating thought that he could not "conquer" his own wife—could not bend to his will the mother of his children.

Is It Really True?

And finally he goes back, drawn by the aching chords of love—for the strange perverted creature really has a kind of love for the woman he is trying to dominate—but when he looks at her through the window he sees that she is still unconquered.

Poor, alone, struggling—she still wears the look of one whose soul is her own, and the man steals away in the darkness and leaves her, broken-hearted and miserable.

What do you think of making such a fool as that into a hero and what do you think of critics who declare that the man who wrote the book is the spokesman for the male sex and says for them what they dare not say for themselves?

Is it really true, gentlemen? Do you really want to "conquer" the woman you pretend to love? Do you want to humble her spirit, break her pride and humiliate her to the very soul—to please your own vanity?

I don't believe it—I really can't believe it! Maybe it is because I don't want to believe it.

I wonder what American men really think of the hero of such a book as this.

HOME-MAKING HELPS

"Everything About the House Helps to Make the Home"

By WANDA BARTON

Are You Planning to Replenish Your Household Supplies This Fall?

WISD housewives are learning that shopping for necessities should be done before the holidays are near, and when the shops begin to prepare for the gift buyers. This sort of shopping demands the making out of most careful lists, which may be checked off as the things are purchased and delivered. Perhaps there is more than can be accomplished in a day, so that the list once made should be taken care of until all this sort of shopping is done.

First, go through the linen and see what must be replenished. This does not mean extravagant buying, but simply keeping things going in the right way. No new things not on the list should be purchased until all of the needs have been met. The trouble is, unless we have a definite purpose and stick to it, time and money will be gone and we will still have the needs unsatisfied. It takes a level head to go shopping for necessities in a list.

Next, household linens, towels and bath towels should be replenished, and the supply for the winter should be ordered. Old towels and bath towels may be cleaned and saved for use, but it is better to have new ones. They are properly hung and cared for they will last a long time after the season. Bath towels, towels for the purpose.

chambray skins for windows and for sun. A supply of cleaning powders, soap, toilet paper, wax paper, and soap dishes and racks. These are purchased in the same department, and must be on hand in fair quantity constantly. The store room should be stocked and the contents given out as they are needed.

The kitchen utensils should be carefully inspected and replenished in the same way, and any little thing added that may be a work saver.

Laundry needs, if the work is done at home, may be looked to at the same time.

If laundry soap is bought by the box, which generally contains a hundred cakes, it should be unpacked and stacked in a dry place, so that it will dry out and go twice as far.

Things in bottles should be put where it will not freeze and burst the bottles. Waxes and all such things should be looked to and replaced if need be. Towels should be purchased, and all the things likely to be needed during the winter. Fresh lines and a supply of soap should not be forgotten.

If there is a chance to buy an extra large supply of wood for the open fire at a good figure, stack it on the porch, protect it with a tarpaulin from rough weather, and use it up before that stored wood is no longer objectionable even in plain sight.

Later in the season, weather and roads make it difficult to deliver, even when the supplies are ample.

YOUR HEALTH

What You Ought to Do if Baby Loses His Appetite

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D. Commissioner of Health, New York City

A FEW days ago I visited one of the baby health stations. Among the mothers present was a sweet-faced, well-dressed woman, worried over her thin and fretful baby.

She was a temporary resident of the city, being on her way from South America to Switzerland. She needed advice about the infant and, knowing no doctor, called at the nearest welfare station for aid.

The little mother did exactly right. If your baby does not thrive you need the advice of a competent doctor. The scales, the skin, the eyes and the temper tell everything about the baby. That is, they tell everything to the trained observer. If you do not feel competent to determine what is wrong, consult your doctor. Do not delay this action because it is necessary to the well-being and perhaps to the life of your child.

You cannot be governed wholly by the appetite of your baby. There may be loss of weight from loss of appetite. There may be loss of weight from the indigestion due to the indulgence of an over-stimulated appetite. A ravenous appetite may be due to abnormal conditions. In short, then, the appetite is no positive sign of health or of the lack of it.

Failure to feed is due to one of several causes. A sore throat or a sore mouth may be the cause. It hurts to swallow or it hurts to feed. Naturally the poor little shaver declines to eat because he is in pain when he attempts to do so. The delicate tissues may be injured by something the baby has put in his mouth, or, if he is old enough, there may be intense soreness of the gums from teething.

Probably the most common cause of lost appetite is wrong feeding. This may mean the feeding of the wrong food, or giving too much of the right food. Perhaps the most common fault in infant feeding is the giving of a mixture too strong in its milk content. Reducing the amount of milk and sugar, or giving less milk often results in improved appetite.

This is a very general statement, and must not be considered as anywhere near infallible. It is better in every case to consult your doctor and follow the advice he gives after examining the child.

Another piece of general advice is to cut down the number of feedings, increasing the length of the intervals between them.

These methods will be likely to increase the appetite and prepare the child for a richer milk mixture and prepare for a larger quantity of food.

Sometimes the infant is so weak and miserable that it cannot take the food as it should. It may linger over its

Do not delay this action because it is necessary to the well-being and perhaps to the life of your child.

Loss of appetite is a condition which demands skilful management. It may be helped by using a nipple with a larger opening, thus permitting a freer flow of milk. In a more extreme case the mother may administer the food with a medicine-dropper.

But do not neglect to seek your doctor's advice if the trouble does not yield promptly. It is much easier for him to bring about speedy relief if he is called early.

Answers to Health Questions

A. R. M. Q.—At times my daughter is troubled with cheesy masses which come up in her throat. Will you please tell me whether this comes from her head or stomach?

A.—Your daughter undoubtedly has disordered tonsils. It would be advisable for her to apply to a throat clinic or consult a throat specialist for an examination and advice. If the tonsils are diseased, they should be removed. Be governed by whatever advice you receive from the specialist.

H. I. Q.—Every time I take a deep breath I get a severe pain in my chest. Will you please tell me where I can go for a complete physical examination?

A.—Is olive oil good for the hair?

A.—You can go to any hospital clinic or to your own physician and be examined to make sure there is no organic trouble present. Be governed by the advice you will receive.

2—Olive oil is good for the hair, provided you massage your scalp with your fingers after applying it.

HEROINES OF HISTORY

Significant Incidents in the Lives of Famous Women

By MARK STUYVESANT

How Barbara Blaugdone Won the Respect of Her Persecutors.

TO those who have pictured a Quakeress as a demure woman who "spoke when spoken to" and let the men take the initiative in everything, "keeping silent in the house of God," Barbara Blaugdone is a revelation. She was the most daring and unafraid woman of the Quaker faith, according to history. The story of her eventual life of persecution and determination begins in 1647.

Barbara Blaugdone was born in Bristol, England, about 1600. She had always been the leader of her social set, and was very wealthy. Beautiful, intelligent and luxurious surroundings had been her chief delight until she became a Quakeress, at 47 years of age. During the first year of her conviction she abstained from eating meat and drank nothing but water as a test of her endurance.

Her first persecution when she made her beliefs known, was imprisonment in a castle jail in Bristol where she was abused daily. But Barbara Blaugdone was undaunted. The minute she was free she walked from the doors of the prison and started to preach Quakerism to the first person she met. On her way to meeting a few days later a man came along and thrust a knife in her side. Her only comment as she swooned with the pain and loss of blood was: "Sir, my soul is so in love with truth that I could this day give up my life for it."

As soon as the militant Quakeress recovered from her injuries she started again on what she believed to be her mission in life. At Marlborough, where she entered a church to speak, she was struck by a man and thrown through the door. Then she was haled before a magistrate and imprisoned.

When released at the end of six weeks of suffering Barbara Blaugdone, still determined to "do or die," started on her way again. During her wanderings she came to the home of the Earl of Bath, where during the days of wealth she had often been received. The servant who opened the door told her that the countess was in the garden, and when she arrived at the back of the house a large dog was set upon her. It is said that the dog was stricken with an illness and went away whining. Unhappily and needlessly, the intrepid Quakeress left the earl's home, reaching the nearest town before midnight. Here she was committed to a jail 20 miles away. Thrown among a band of rogues who had been arrested for vagrancy, she taught them, and many were converted. As a result she was taken to another town and whipped severely, then turned out into the bitter cold night. That night she slept in a pig trough.

Reckless in health and nearly frozen from exposure, Barbara Blaugdone, who was then 50 years of age, returned to her home in Bristol. Here she lived to be the oldest of the Quaker pioneers, being nearly 100 years of age when she passed away.

But she lived to see her people given freedom to worship in their own way in 1688, and contributed many books to literature before her death.

She Chats About a Smart Afternoon Frock Introducing a Novel Drapery.

LAST Sunday I had a beautiful drive out into the country. It was more of a pleasure because it came as a surprise.

"Oh, dear, this would be a heavenly day to be in the country," I was thinking to myself, as I looked out the window. I was having late breakfast, and the world seemed a pretty good place to be in.

The phone rang as if in answer to my thoughts. "How would you like to go off for the day?" I was asked by some friends who often motor out and spend Sundays in the country.

I accepted with enthusiasm, and before long we were out enjoying the autumn scenery to our hearts' content.

We had a light luncheon at a little roadside inn, because we were very anxious to push on to a quiet place our host knew of for tea. We seemed to be in a lovely place, but so sarcastic that I sometimes dread seeing her. She thinks nothing of embarrassing me in public, and saying things that sting me bitterly. I cannot propose to her, though I want to. I may meet sarcasm in her reply. Anyway, I would not like to marry her, unless she broke this habit. I cannot believe that it is more than a habit that has attached itself to my girl.

What can I do? I love her in spite of this.

HERMAN HEART THROBS.

Herman heart throbs: Have you spoken nicely to your friend and told her frankly that she hurts you with her sarcasm? Do not propose to her unless you are sure you would be very happy with her.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 8.

A lively and prosperous day is foretold from the ruling planetary forces. The lunar time to Mercury is said as bringing stirring and active conditions in all commercial and professional enterprises, and the time is a part of Luna to Jupiter encourages the assurance of satisfactory financial returns, and promises increase in business and the accumulation of wealth. Those in the employment of others are, however, urged to be careful as difficulties are forecast.

Those whose birthday it is have the promise of a successful year, with increase of business and money, but those in the employment of others may find considerable difficulties unless they are unusually fortunate in a selection of a child to train in the day well be served, necessary and ambitious, and should attract success. It should make headway in the active industry and generally.

Dull Gold Braid Trims This Black and Green Crepe Gown.

"This seems to be such an out-of-the-way spot. I'm surprised to see all these motors," I remarked.

"It's very fashionable," Mrs. Anderson assured me. "And it's such a delightful drive that many people come here."

Inside we heard a buzz of lively conversation, and many smartly-dressed people seated around the tea-tables. We were ushered to a cozy corner table, and while we ordered tea and cinnamon toast I looked about me.

"There's a stunning-looking woman," Mr. Anderson commented.

I followed the direction of his glance, and saw a very lovely person being shown to her table. Usually I notice gowns first and then the face. That's really the wrong system, I know, but I suppose my career as a model is responsible. This time, however, I realized that she was very pretty before I even glanced at the black and green frock she wore.

"Her dress is lovely," Mrs. Anderson said. "I wonder where she got it."

Now, Mrs. Anderson is so stout to look well in things that aren't very plain, but I didn't blame her for wanting to look like this lovely creature.

"What material do you think it is?" she asked me.

"It seems to be a fine, heavy crepe," I answered. "And isn't it novel? The way the deep green border is draped?"

"How is it done?" Mrs. Anderson asked. "Your practiced eye should be able to tell."

"Why, the deep green is simply a straight border sewed on in the back," I explained. "It seems to be attached only as far as each side, then the ends are caught up, crossed over and attached at the middle."

"I could make one now, myself," declared Mrs. Anderson.

"This brand is in gold at the neck and gleils like this one," I urged. "The dull gold is so lovely against the black."

"Any man could make love to a dress pretty woman in such a fetching hat," Mrs. Anderson declared. "That hat of hers seems to enchantize it."

It was a little poke affair of black tulle, and I quite agreed with him.

GIFFORD PINCHOT GOVERNOR OF PA. BY A 200,000 MAJ.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 8.—Gifford Pinchot is today governor-elect of Pennsylvania by a majority of more than 215,000. The victory, however, is slightly marred by Democratic inroads in several counties which have hitherto been unquestioned strongholds. In eight of the 26 congressional districts in the state Democrats have won according to available returns.

A feature of the election is the large vote of Senator George Wharton Pepper and David A. Reed the number of votes polled for them far exceeding that garnered by Pinchot.

BOSTON, Nov. 8.—With figures from 13 Boston and Worcester election precincts missing, it was apparent today that Henry Cabot Lodge, Republican, had been returned to office by an exceedingly narrow margin. Lodge's lead was scarcely over 2,500 and it was expected complete returns would reduce this.

KEMAL TO MAKE TURKS' CAPITAL DRY AS POWDER

Constantinople On Last Jag, Fearing He'll Make Promise Good

DOUZICO POPULAR DRINK

Pure Alcohol, It Has A Powerful Kick—Much Beer Consumed, Too

By JOHN HADLEY.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 8.—Thurs raised East of Suez are going to be unslakable, so far as Constantinople is concerned, once Mustafa Kemal Pasha takes over the city.

Kemal has made all Anatolia as dry as the Hejaz Desert and declares he will do the same for the Turkish capital. It will take considerable drying up to check the moisture of Constantinople, for the per capita consumption of hard liquor in the European quarter of Pera is about the same as it used to be in the old First Ward in Chicago.

DOUZICO POWERFUL.

Douzico, a slow and poisonous drink that hits you with the awkwardness and wallop of Battling Siki and is so powerful that it is never taken without a handful of crackers spread with caviar or sour cheese as a decoy for it to work on instead of the lining of the stomach, is the principal beverage. It is made on the spot from raw U. S. alcohol imported from the States in great steel drums.

No man can drink douzico long and survive. This is proved by the countless cemeteries that sprawl over all the bare Constantinople hillsides.

When the Germans were the dominant influence at the Sublime Porte they introduced beer to the followers of the Prophet, and now one of the biggest breweries in the world is in the city on the Golden Horn. Beer has been the most lasting vestige of the German regime, and a stone no larger than a man's hand thrown at random in any direction in Taksim square would be sure to hit at least three good Mohammedans fingering their prayer beads with one hand and a twelve-inch stein of Pilsener with the other. The Koran forbids the consumption of alcohol—but the Koran was written before the Germans introduced beer to Constantinople. The Turk's view probably is that Mohammed must have revealed his copy if he had ever tasted Pilsener.

LIKES IT HIMSELF.

Despite Kemal's closing of all the cafes and domino parlors of Anatolia and his ban on the cup that cheers his intimates assert that Mustapha himself likes his liquor. This may or may not be, but an American business man who went to Kemal's headquarters in Smyrna to protect United States tobacco interests, taking luggage principally composed of a dozen bottles of cognac and the same number of Scotch, became, after the drawing of the initial cork, the most popular non-Mohammedan this side of Gibraltar.

The American tobacco was saved But the cognac and the Scotch weren't.

Kemal declares, though that he is going to dry up the town, and the fear that he will make good his threat makes every night in Constantinople a small-scale reproduction of New Year's Eve on Broadway in the old days. Constantinople is on its last jag, and it is a large-scale jag, with no change given, no drinks mixed and with "We who are about to buy salute you!" the battle cry.

CLEVELAND, O. Nov. 8.—Pronounced by art and dramatic critics who are here to attend the premier performance to be the finest in the United States, if not in the world, Keith's new Palace theatre, in the new 22-story Keith office building, constructed at a cost of more than $5,000,000, was formally opened here tonight with several hundred prominent persons and social leaders from New York, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Columbus, Indianapolis, Louisville, Syracuse, Washington and other cities in attendance.

A special train carrying the New York representation arrived here this morning. In the party—numbering more than 200—were many New York and Boston society women, dramatic critics, newspapermen and theatrical magnates.

Including those present at tonight's performance were the governors of eight states, E. F. Albee of Boston, president of the B. F. Keith circuit of theatres; J. J. Murdoch, general manager, and many other representatives of large theatrical holdings. Mr. Albee declared the theatre was built and dedicated by him to the memory of his lifelong friend and associate, B. F. Keith.

From the grand hall, where are displayed rare paintings and antiques secured by Mr. Albee after two years' search of European galleries and castles, to the "back stage," where is found all the luxury and convenience of the modern club, the theatre is acknowledged by all critics to be the last word in theatre construction and beauty. TURKS REFUSE TO ACCEPT TERMS OF JOINT OCCUPATION

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 8.—Rafet Pasha one of the representatives of the Ankara government, informed the allied high commissioners yesterday that the Turkish Nationalists can not accept dual control of this city. Consequently a deadlock has developed over the Turkish demand that the allies get out. It is understood that the allied high commissioners have been authorized to proclaim martial law if necessary. Greek and Armenian residents are in panic. Many have applied to the allied embassies for protection. The British have evacuated 7,000 fugitives to Salonika on British ships. Fugitives are flocking into the city.

Rafet Pasha who was appointed governor general of Constantinople by the Ankara government is continuing to levy new demands upon the allies. He insists that the Greeks be expelled from the city at once.

The Kemalists have increased the tax levies, forcing citizens to keep up the constantly growing Turkish Nationalist army.

Grounds for cutting down the fee were that the court would make itself a party to a law violation if it granted the full fee asked inasmuch as Hilsinger and officials of the brewery have just been convicted of conspiring to violate the prohibition laws and sentenced to terms in prison.
